"We're not going to jump blindly into the appointment of a fire chief to succeed the late C. Edward Buchan," J. Everett Collins asserted this week.

"We can take someone from the department or we can go to Florida. It doesn't make any difference," declared the chairman of the selectmen.

Mr. Collins said the board has designated member Sidney P. White to sign department payrolls and warrants until a chief is appointed. "The board will supervise the department," Mr. Collins explained.

Firefighter J. Woodrow Crowley has been appointed by the selectmen to take charge of the platoon formerly in charge of the chief. Collins said the veteran firefighter had been taking care of most of the bookkeeping and records in the department.

Explaining that there is no civil service provision for the chief, Mr. Collins also pointed out that, once appointed, he will have tenure in the office.

There were several groups of girls from various parts of the state helping to get the camp in order before the summer season opens.

As an added treat, the girls prepared and ate all their meals out of doors. Susan Miller and Peggy Jo Lacey were in charge of the breakfast which was cooked on an out-door barbecue at the home of Mrs. Lacey.

The next stop was Whitman where the girls prepared their lunch under the direction of Shirley Warshaw and Carolyn Robertson. The Blue Hills park recreational area was an ideal spot for a supper stop and Marion Morgan and Luanne King had charge of the meal.

Mrs. Norman Miller was one of the drivers and assisted the leaders.

"GAS HEAT IS A BARGAIN" SAYS RETAIL STORE CLERK

"Now that we've changed to Gas heat, we could never give it up. We were surprised at how little it costs with the new lower Gas heat rates.

Because it's clean it doesn't need as much service, there are fewer cleaning bills, and no fuel storage problems. My wife says that the reason our family is healthier is because the rooms are more evenly heated in winter. Gas heat is a bargain in my book."

Town Lost A Good Man

We join the citizens of Andover, and many from beyond our borders, who this week mourn the passing of Roy E. Hardy.

He was a devoted public servant, who never forgot that he was elected to represent his townfolk. He was always kind and courteous, willing to listen to all sides of a question before making a decision; never autocratic or disdainful of others' opinions; ready to hear the requests of every citizen.

Mr. Hardy was a man who spent much of his time in our service. For 18 years he was a member of the boards of selectmen and assessors. He served on the planning board and finance committee as well as being a member of many of the civic and charitable organizations in our midst. There are, indeed, few men who would devote so much of their time and energy to public activities.

The town will miss the presence of Roy Hardy, for even in retirement from public life he contributed heavily to our general welfare, by sharing the wisdom born of 18 years' experience in our service.

We join our fellow citizens in extending heart-felt sympathy to his family. We shall miss him, too.

The fact that 1954 ends with nearly 60 percent of American families owning their own homes does not indicate that the saturation point is near; it indicates that the desire to own a home is growing more universal with the relative ease of obtaining a mortgage. — Banker & Tradesman.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS

Request for water extension to house lot on Lovejoy rd. received attention. Mr. Leary of Somerville asked extension, indicating that a house will be built there. Chairman Sidney P. White said there is little chance of extending the water, due to other projects ahead and cost of $3200 to $3500 for the project.

Board considered plans for re-routing sewer main in Shawsheen, allowing for construction of addition to Merrimack Mutual Fire Insurance company. Presented by engineer Clinton Goodwin and referred to board engineer Warren Peterson.

He will do preliminary studies and supervise construction on the Rogers brook and Shawsheen Heights drainage.

His fee, the board said, would be 9.8 percent of the estimated $171,000 construction cost, for a total of $16,758.

The price quoted by the Charles Maquire associates was $25,300. The New England Survey company said its fee would be $32,500 plus a proportionate extra cost if the construction took over 75 working days.

The second polio shot can be given before school closes, he asserted, if three weeks is allowed from the time of the first inoculation.

A special message to parents who have now decided not to have their children inoculated has been issued by Dr. Emmons. "They must notify the school in writing before Friday noon," he asserted, "that the youngster is not to have the vaccine." Otherwise, acting on the basis of prior consent slips, the child will be inoculated, he explained.

The fire department picked up the vaccine yesterday in Jamaica Plain. It was delivered to the board of health office for eventual distribution to the schools where inoculations will take place.

High School Boys Build Organ In Pursuit Of Unusual Hobby

Vincent Treanor, center, and his partner, George Reed, left, built this pipe organ in the high school laboratory with the help of friends like Bill McCullom, right. The two boys have been building organs for five years and have invested something over $200 in the project carried on in an old barn behind the Treanor home on Osgood rd. and in his cellar. Reed lives on Dascomb rd. and McCullom is a Summer st. resident.

By David E. Young

Organ music echoes through the corridors at Punchard high school these days.

And it's all the fault of young Vincent Treanor.

One of this year's graduating class, Treanor has built himself a pipe organ smack in the middle of the third floor science lab. It's no small organ either, with two manuals and seven stops.

Flocks of curious kids have been trooping in and out of the lab since May 7, when Treanor and his assistant, George Reed, a junior high school student, began to build the instrument.

So, too, have teachers displayed their curiosity. Late the other afternoon, when the building normally would have been empty, one of them sat down and played the Whiffenpoof Song, with all the stops out. No one knows where the kids came from, but before the last notes died out a crowd gathered and demanded more.

Fortunately, the music and a certain amount of essential tuning and testing have been regarded mostly as a curiosity by classroom teachers nearby.

Said Treanor's science teacher, Arthur Danforth, "There's a great deal of interest, with no decision rendered whether they're irritated by the noise or not". Work on the organ sometimes coincides with serious classroom activities in adjoining rooms.

Parents as well as teachers found out how well the boys have done last night when the PTSA inspected the organ and other scientific projects on display at the school.

Although he is only 19, Treanor played the organ as well as described the work that went into building it. But whether anyone understood his highly technical explanations is something else again.

For the youngster talks in the language of the professional, although he never has had a formal lesson in organ building.

"I've read up on it", Treanor explained, reeling off a yard-long list of books on the subject. "And an organ builder gave me a few pointers".

Despite the absence of formal training, he has built a reed organ in a barn out back of his parents' home; tuned the organ of the Methodist church in Ballardvale and one or two privately-owned instruments.

The know-how he displays apparently comes from native ability, Mr. Danforth explained. "He's a very brilliant boy", he went on, and expressed the hope that Treanor will continue his formal education.

After only six lessons from a local church organist, Treanor has built up a repertoire that takes two and a half hours to complete, playing without pause.

He's played that long in a stretch on the world-famous Serlo organ in Methuen Memorial music hall, one of the world's only halls built specially to house an organ.

"It's a lot of fun to play that organ", the lad enthused.

There, too, he has helped. Thomas Byers tune the giant instrument, a job considered rather difficult by experts in the field.

Treanor's interest in organs began about five years ago, when he was looking for an instrument he could play. There just didn't seem to be one anywhere - at least for a kid without training - so he went out and bought a small organ factory.

"There were a lot of parts", he explained, "and a small reed organ". Treanor and Reed took it apart and moved the lot into the barn where they rebuilt the organ and experimented in construction, turning out a second reed organ from parts left over or made right there.

But it wasn't until last March that the boys were able to buy what they really wanted - a pipe organ.

They found it in Lowell, at the Emmanuel Baptist church. Built in the late 1800's for the Congregational church in Chelmsford, the organ was out of repair. The lads took it apart and carted the pieces to Andover and their barn workshop.

They rebuilt the instrument, making repairs where necessary. When completed, the case stands 12 feet high, with an eight foot pipe standing another six or seven feet above that. It's so large, in fact, that it won't stand upright in the science lab at the school.

"But it's simple enough", Treanor declared. "We just ran a garden hose from the organ to a separate block on the floor and stood the pipes up in that. Then, when I press the keys, the pipes get air through the hose and play just like they should."

Bought along with the old organ was an one-third horse power motor and a blower which builds up three and a half inches of pressure. The boys rebuilt that piece of equipment, too.

In all, the lads have invested "something over $200", with only a small return. "But if we sell this organ after we get it rebuilt completely, that will put us even or better", Treanor said. He pointed out that there remains some 10 years of life in the instrument.

"This business isn't very complicated", Treanor grinned, "once you get into it".

"There's a secret to putting every piece of an organ together - and once you know the secret, it's simple", he continued.

For instance Treanor can dismantle the pipe organ in four hours but it takes up to 40 working hours to rebuild it, with lots of adjustments and the inevitable tuning. The present construction in the high school is the fourth major rebuilding job on the instrument.

However, organ building and repair isn't the only interest for the lad. He finds scientific subjects fascinating and electronics intriguing. He built an oscillator for the high school lab early this year and has fooled around with electronic gadgets in his basement workshop at home. Once, he even went so far as to build an organ, using, of course, electric controls, "but that one didn't work", he admitted. He pointed out that either direct electric or pneumatic electric actions are now used in most organs, "so I work with them, too".

Whether Treanor will follow the organ building field or not is a problem which remains undecided. For electronics have an attraction that may pull him away from music.

"It's something to fall back on anyway", he asserted. "I can do it, now, so it'll always come in handy, whatever else I do".

Treanor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Treanor, Osgood rd. and Reed is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Reed, Dascomb rd.

Van Coppennolle Held Over For Grand Jury

A desperate need for funds was the reason why Emil Van Coppennolle Jr. held up the Shawsheen Motor Mart, according to police.

He was held for the grand jury Tuesday morning in Lawrence, with bail set at $7500, after pleading guilty to charges of holding up the night watchman at the garage and driving away in the private car of Police Chief David L. Nicoll.

Listed as living at 202 1/2 Lowell st., Lawrence, Van Coppennolle was due to appear in court this Saturday for sentencing on charges of neglect of family. Tuesday, Judge John J. Darcy sentenced him to four months in the house of correction on that charge after the probation officer surrendered him.

Police Sgt. William R. Hickey said he questioned the man at Lowell following his arrest there about 15 minutes after Andover police sent out the alarm. Sgt. Hickey told the court the man said he needed money for his wife and child before the court appearance this Saturday.

Van Coppennolle asked the court to appoint counsel, but Judge Darcy said that was not his province.

The court was told that the defendant had borrowed a car belonging to a younger brother who lives on North st., Andover, and drove to Lowell Sunday night. Returning late at night, the car broke down near the home of his father, West Andover. He walked to the house and there secured the shotgun used in the holdup, according to testimony of police in district court. After committing the holdup, he drove on Route 133 to Lowell and tossed the shotgun out the window onto the lawn of his father's house, police said.

Sgt. Hickey said the defendant walked to Shawsheen, put a mask over his face and entered the garage where he took $2700 from Michael A. Borrelli, night watchman. He also ordered Borrelli to start up the car belonging to Chief Nicoll and drove to the door, police related.

Coppenolle Over For and Jury

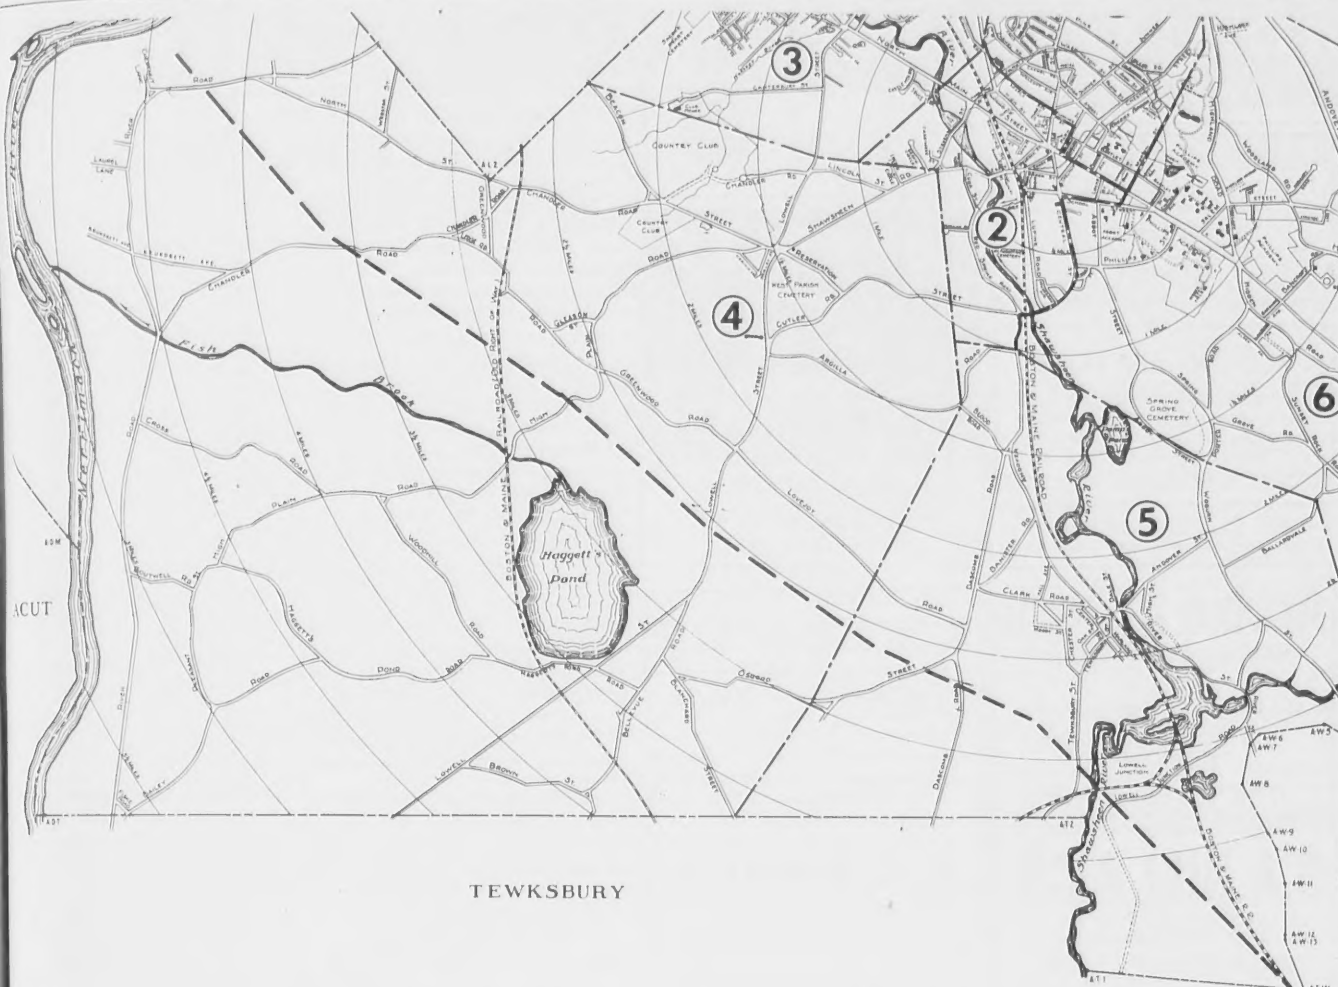

Mr. Treanor need for funds to appear in court this morning in Lawrence, Mass. set at $7500, after pleading guilty to charges of holding a night watchman in the prior driving away in the prior of Police Chief David L.

Mr. Treanor as living at 202 1/2 Lowell Lawrence, Van Coppenolle to appear in court this morning for sentencing on charges of neglect of family. Tuesday, John J. Darcy sentenced him to 15 months in the house of correction on that charge after the on officer surrendered him. Sgt. William R. Hickey questioned the man in following his arrest there 15 minutes after alarm. Sgt. told the court the man needed money for his wife to appear before the court this Saturday.

Coppenolle asked the court to appoint counsel, but Judge said that was not his province.

The court was told that the defendant had borrowed a car belonging to a younger brother who lives on North st., Andover, and went to Lowell Sunday night. Returning at night, the car broke down at the home of his father in Andover. He walked to the house and there secured the shotgun used in the holdup, according to testimony of police in district. After committing the holdup, he drove on Route 133 to Lowell and tossed the shotgun out the window onto the lawn of his father's house, police said.

Sgt. Hickey said the defendant was taken to Shawsheen, put in a cell over his face and entered a garage where he took $27.95. Michael A. Borrelli, the night watchman, he also ordered the car to start up the car belonging to Chief Nicoll and drive it to the door, police related.

The map indicates approximately where the new Route 28 will be constructed in Andover, based on state department of public works figures released last week. A hearing was held yesterday in Boston on the proposal. The route layout was prepared by the Townsman from state estimates.

Hearing Held On New Route 28

A hearing for those interested in the new Route 28, now scheduled to run partially through Ballardvale and West Andover, was held yesterday in the department of public works' office in Boston. The new highway is planned to be 19.7 miles long, from a point slightly west of the Stoneham-River town line to the New Hampshire state line on Broadway, Methuen.

As specified by the state, the road will cross several streets in Andover before crossing the Merrimack.

They include Dascomb rd., about .4 of a mile southwest of intersection with Osgood st.; Osgood st. about .3 of a mile west of intersection with Dascomb rd. Lowell st. about .4 of a mile southwest of its intersection with Lovejoy rd.; High Plain rd. about .5 of a mile west of intersection with Greenwood rd.

Chandler rd. about 1 mile southeast of intersection with River rd. River rd. about .6 of a mile northwest of intersection with North st.

Also to be heard at the Boston hearing is a plan to construct a limited access highway from a point on the new Route 28 near its intersection with Andover st. in Wilmington northeasterly to the intersection of South Main st., Andover (present Route 28) and the Andover By-pass, Route 125. The road would be approximately 2.5 miles long, running through portions of Wilmington, North Reading before reaching Andover.

It was reported last week that surveyors were working along the banks of the Merrimack and that some surveying had been going on in Methuen, just across the river from the proposed bridge.

fifth and sixth grades on a voluntary basis. Both parents and teachers must approve the student's decision to take it. In September, 1956, French will become mandatory for all students in grades three and four and optional in grades five and six.

One teacher will be hired for September and another will be needed in the fall of 1956, the committee said. Supt. Erickson was authorized to seek a French teacher to begin the program in September.

The report as accepted also made oral French an elective subject in grades seven through 12, as present classes reach that level.

The sub-committee which presented the report was made up of school committee members Mrs. Dorothy Partridge, chairman; Roy Russell and high school French teacher Miss E. Marjorie Smith.

The committee presented a four-page report on the subject, listing the advantages of the program and commenting on other school systems that are now including some type of elementary language instruction in their curriculum.

The committee also suggested that it be continued in order to study various phases of the program and other related activities that might be practical in the future.

Miss Anna Greeley, chairman of the board, appointed the three present members and added Miss Catherine M. Barrett and Lionel Goulet to the committee, which will report in November on progress of the new program.

The Andover Junior baseball team licked an old-timers team, 2-0, last Monday night.

Played between showers, the game was close enough to maintain interest all the way.

Rumors flew thick and fast that the cold, damp weather prevented the old-timers from getting warmed up. Thus another game between the same teams has been scheduled for tonight at 6:30 on the Playstead.

Pitching last Monday for the old-timers were Tom Law, Doug Howe, Bob Burnham and Lafayette Stickney.

For Building or Rebuilding a Highway... CONCRETE is the Best Pavement Buy

For building a new highway or improving an old one, concrete is the safe, durable, economical pavement.

Concrete is safe. Its gritty surface is uniformly skid-resistant, wet or dry. At night it reflects the most light. Higher visibility results in fewer accidents.

Concrete is durable. Many concrete highways all over the country have served for 25 years or longer and are still good for many more years of economical service. Today, air-entrained concrete eliminates scaling, provides even greater built-in durability.

Concrete is economical. It usually costs less to build than any other pavement designed for the same traffic. It has longer life and costs much less to maintain. This results in true low-annual-cost service.

The relocation of Route 28 from Boston through Lawrence to the New Hampshire line concerns every Massachusetts motorist. Concrete pavement on new 28 will give even greater value for your dollar than the existing concrete on present 28, now 24 years old. That surely is something to think about—because you are going to pay the bill.
